Saying his personal life is off-limits, singer Marc Anthony refused to confirm Tuesday whether he's married to Jennifer Lopez. During an appearance on NBC's "Today" show, co-host Matt Lauer asked the Latin singer how he had spent his weekend. "I see where you're going with this, and I'm going to preface it with just saying -- y'all know I don't talk about my personal life," Anthony said. Lauer replied: "So, I -- do I need to congratulate you?" "Yeah, I have two albums coming out, man. Absolutely. And I would appreciate it," the 34-year-old singer said. Anthony, who performed in Rockefeller Plaza, was wearing what appeared to be a wedding band on his left hand. When Lauer continued to ask whether a wedding had taken place Saturday at Lopez's home in Beverly Hills, Calif., Anthony responded, "That would fall into the category of personal. And that's where I'm going to leave it."

Jill Hennessy says posing for the cameras is part of her job, but she's not a very good model. The star of NBC's "Crossing Jordan" said she once was a model for a Nicole Miller fashion show and spent her whole time on the runway worrying about whether she'd break a heel. "To be a good model, I'd need a lot more confidence," said Hennessy, "and more confidence to be more bare."

She ran into Miller at Monday night's Council of Fashion Designers of America awards, held at the New York Public Library.

Died: Robert Quine, a versatile punk rock guitarist who appeared on albums by Lou Reed, Marianne Faithfull and Tom Waits. He was 61. Police found Quine dead in his New York apartment Saturday, said James Marshall, a friend.

Died: Marcelle Wilder, wife of Tennessee Lt. Gov. and Senate Speaker John Wilder, in her sleep at her Somerville home early Monday. She was 83.

Signed Up: More than 3 million Americans for Medicare drug discount cards, but confusion persists, a Senate panel was told Tuesday. About 2.4 million of the 3 million-plus enrollees are members of health maintenance organizations who were enrolled automatically in their HMOs' card programs.
